

Forgiveness poem

We can never truly be free,
Until we learn to forgive.

Forgiveness is the key used to unlock your cell.

You are sentenced for life without it,
Suffocating between four walls.

Guilt and hate will swallow you whole.

There will be no escape.

A life long lived but always lacking.

As empty as a wine glass knocked onto the carpet.

Leaving stains that can never be removed.

The only way to begin healing,

Is to forgive and let go of the resentful feeling.
